The UPS and downs of Power Protection

Possibly one of the least thought about but most important items within your server network is the uninterruptible power system (UPS). What was once an optional extra, is now a requirement with every server, network device, phone system (VOIP) and other mission-critical equipment.

Overall power quality has dropped in recent years due to the lack of maintenance and increasing load on our power grids, as has been seen over the summer months. Worst yet that all predictions point to increasing outages and power problems to come. With the current economic climate and budgets tightening, it is time to look at ways of reducing failures and downtime while increasing productivity to save money.

Computers Now are able to offer you an audit of your equipment to determine your requirements and the most appropriate method of maintaining a working power protection system. With good maintenance practices you'll be confident knowing that your UPS will work when most needed.
